Safety and Justice Microgrant Program Guidelines

BACKGROUND

The Allegheny County Jail population grew over 80% from 1995 to 2010, even as crime increased. Although the population was on a downward trend since 2010, the decline has not reflected the lower crime rate. At the start of the COVID-19 pandemic a significant decline in the jail population (30%) took place because of both a 77% decrease in new jail bookings and the release of older and health-compromised individuals; individuals sentenced to the jail who could be paroled early; and individuals awaiting trial or probation violation hearings who could safely be released. However, racial disparities have been persistent, with Black residents consistently comprising over 60% of the jail population despite making up just 13% of Allegheny County residents.

Nationally and locally, there is growing recognition of the issues related to overincarceration.
These issues include the amount of time that people presumed innocent are held in jail awaiting trial, the prevalence of mental health and substance use issues among people involved in the criminal justice system, the disproportionate incarceration rates of Black people and other people of color, and the cost of incarceration to taxpayers. The Safety & Justice Microgrant program recognizes that solutions to these issues must include community-led strategies and is intended to uplift and provide resources for efforts to reduce jail population and racial disparities. The Microgrant program will fund efforts that are led by communities that bear the greatest burden over overincarceration.

Over the past several months, Pittsburgh Foundation staff have co-created this grant-making program with a seven-member Community Advisory Committee (CAC)\(^1\) that was originally appointed by County Executive Rich Fitzgerald and President Judge Kim Clark, to identify the drivers of over-incarceration and develop its own recommendations to reduce the jail population and racial disparities. That initiative was a part of a grant that Allegheny County received from the MacArthur Foundation. The CAC members and The Pittsburgh Foundation share the goals of supporting effective alternatives to excessive jail incarceration and reducing racial and ethnic disparities in the criminal justice system and have complementary strengths. The members of the CAC have important expertise related to criminal justice reform and serve as key advisors and grant reviewers for this grant program, stewarding the process alongside the Pittsburgh

ABOUT THE SAFETY AND JUSTICE MICROGRANT PROGRAM

Eligibility
To be eligible for this grant, you must:

- Be a nonprofit with 501(c)3 status as determined by the IRS, or an organized collective that is fiscally sponsored by an organization that has 501(c)3 status as determined by the IRS. If you plan to utilize a fiscal sponsor, please see the Foundation’s fiscal sponsorship guidelines to ensure that your fiscal sponsor meets our requirements.
- Have a physical presence in, and work must primarily benefit residents of, Allegheny County.
- Address at least one of the four areas of interest identified for this program:
  - Prevention: Projects and organizations that address the root causes of harm, victimization, incarceration or racial disparities in the criminal justice system. This could include, but is not limited to, direct services that address the unmet social, emotional and/or financial needs of people or communities that have experienced high rates of harm and incarceration. Supported projects will provide interventions that occur before an individual comes into formal contact with the system.
  - Community-based diversion models: Projects and organizations that provide alternatives to arrest or incarceration for individuals who have come into contact with the criminal justice system. Supported projects will divert individuals from the criminal legal system by creating a “system” of early identification, assessment and intervention that seeks to address the social/emotional, financial, behavioral and mental health needs of a person within the context of their family, school and community.
  - Reentry: Projects and organizations that interrupt the cycle of incarceration. This could include direct services for people who have experienced incarceration, operating costs for organizations that do work to support people reentering communities after incarceration and/or work to reduce recidivism, and other related projects.
  - Raising awareness about incarceration: Efforts to raise awareness about the causes and effects of over-incarceration and racial disparities in the system, providing the ability to bridge conversations in the county.

Additionally, we have developed several priorities for this program. Preference will be given to proposals that:
• Demonstrate that the organization and/or program leadership has previous experience delivering programs that align with the four areas of interest, described above.
• Demonstrate that the organization and/or project is informed by and/or led by people who are currently or formerly incarcerated and/or their family members.
• Address the impact of overincarceration on Black, Indigenous and people of color (Asian, Latino/Latinx, Arab and Native American).
• Demonstrate that the organization has an established history in the communities that it serves and has ongoing relationships with community residents who inform its priorities.

• Organizational start-up support.
• Statewide or national organizations, unless they have an established local office or chapter that meets the above application and eligibility criteria and priorities.

About the Community Advisory Committee

The Community Advisory Committee (CAC) is a seven-member community stakeholder group appointed by County Executive Rich Fitzgerald and President Judge Kim Clark that meets monthly to learn about Allegheny County’s current strategies as a part of the MacArthur funded Safety and Justice Challenge project. Its charge is to identify gaps in the criminal justice continuum that allow disparities to persist. The CAC develops its own recommendations to reduce the jail population and racial disparities.

The committee is comprised of individuals with diverse perspectives from the faith-based community, people with lived experiences within the criminal justice system, immigrant and refugee populations, as well as other populations who have been affected by the justice system or who are committed to improving the justice system.
